Bioengineering

Bioengineering is an interdisciplinary field that applies scientific and engineering principles to the development of new biologics, materials, devices, and processes in the broad areas of bioprocess, biomedical, and bioenvironmental technology. You will study heat and fluid flow and how they are coupled with biological reactions or phenomena.

With a Bioengineering degree you can work in pharmaceutical industry, medical device and diagnostics, food and beverage, commodities, petrochemical or paper products, etc. Common employment industries include cosmetics, prosthetics, fermentation, cellular and tissue engineering.

Bachelor of Science Degree (BS) in the College of Engineering

- A minimum of 192 credits are required for graduation; 60 must be upper division (300 and 400-level courses).
- A maximum of 124 credits earned at a community college may be applied toward a bachelor's degree at OSU.
